REPUBLICAN CAUCUS

Tuesday evening the fall Republican caucus was held in Town hall. The meeting was called to order by Mr. A. S. Allen, chairman of the Republican town committee, who read the caucus call as follows:

"The Republican voters of the town of Arlington are hereby requested to meet in caucus at Town hall on Tuesday, Sept. 25th, 1900, at 8 p.m., to choose five delegates each to the Republican state, congressional, councillor, county and senatorial conventions, and ten delegates to the representative convention of 1900, to elect a town committee for 1901, and to transact such business as may properly come before the caucus. This caucus will be held and will be held under the provisions of Chapter 54 of the Acts of 1898, and will be called to order by some member of the town committee."

The first business was the choosing of a chairman. Mr. Jacob Bitzer nominated Mr. Warren W. Rawson, who was unanimously chosen. Mr. Stephen B. Wood, being nominated by Mr. John Bailey, was also unanimously chosen secretary, and the business of the caucus was commenced.

Chairman Rawson asked how the various delegates should be elected.

Mr. Arthur J. Wellington moved that the caucus proceed to vote for delegates for all the conventions and for members of the town committee upon one ballot, and that the check list be used.

The chairman appointed Messrs. Benjamin G. Jones, Robinson and John Bailey as tellers, and also said the polls would be kept open 30 minutes.

During the voting the chairman and secretary were busy making out the delegates' credentials, and requested that all those present would take same, thus saving the secretary sending them through the mail."

The voting was light, there being only 33 votes cast when the ballots were counted.

The whole list of delegates, as printed on the ballot, were elected, they being as follows:

To the State convention:

J. Q. A. Brackett
J. Howell Crosby
John W. Bailey, Jr.
Walter Crosby
Arthur J. Wellington

To the Congressional convention:

Frank C. Allen
Theodore Schwamb
Franklin Wyman
Alfred T. Marston
M. Ernest Moore

To the Councillor convention:

Warren W. Rawson
George D. Moore
Winfield S. Durbin
Charles S. Parker
Benjamin G. Jones

To the County convention:

Edwin S. Farmer
Henry S. Adams
Samuel E. Kimball
Frank Y. Wellington
Fred M. Goodwillie

To the Senatorial convention:

Jacob Bitzer
H. Augustus Phinney
George W. Sears
Edgar Crosby
Edward A. Bailey

Representative to the General court:

J. Howell Crosby

To the Representative convention:

Horace A. Freeman

THREE ROBBERIES.

Arlington seems to have become a field for house thieves, judging from the record of the past week. They are decidedly daring ones too, as each have occurred in the early evening hours and two of them near the center. The first one occurred last Saturday evening at the residence of Mr. Harlan Bean, 1218 Mass. avenue, a full account of which will be found the Arlington Heights column.

The next break was made Thursday evening, between the hours of 7:45 and 9:45, at the residence of Mr. George A. Teel, 825 Mass. avenue, while the members of the family were away. Upon returning they found the house all upset and it was soon discovered that a gang of thieves had thoroughly ransacked the house. After a thorough search the following articles were found missing: A gold hunting-case watch, Elgin movement, number 5499626, belonging to the daughter Edith, marked "Edith R. Teel," with a long neck chain, a gold stick pin, flower shape, with a ruby and four pearls, a twisted gold ring, plain gold ring, gold cameo ear rings with pin to match, pair gold ear drops, the same having four pearls and marked "E. A. T.," to which was attached solid gold chain, a pair of gold link cuff buttons, 7 silver tea spoons, three silver tablespoons, six old-fashioned teaspoons, a gold-lined sugar spoon, napkin rings and eight souvenir spoons, the whole amount of values taken footing up some $200.

Not satisfied with this they ransacked the bureau draws, throwing the wearing apparel out and spit tobacco juice over them, and they seemed to take delight in spitting where they pleased to add to their already nefarious work.

It was found, upon investigation, that an entrance had been made through a cellar window and that the thieves had attempted to force an entrance at three back windows, as there was a three-quarter inch indentation on the sill of each, made by a two-pronged jimmy. The police lost no time in trying to locate the stolen property and in this they partially succeeded, finding the watch at a pawn shop on Merrimac street.

A second break was made at the paint shop of Mr. J. W. Harrington, located at 450 Mass. avenue, the same evening, an entrance being made by breaking a pane of glass in the back door. Here they made a good haul, it consisting of varnish and kalsomine-brushes and two diamond glass cutters. Mr. Harrington notified the police and within a few hours the property was discovered at the place above mentioned.

HARD LUCK.

The members of the committee on repairs for old Eureka were a busy lot of men on Friday, Saturday, and Sunday, both day and night, in getting the new parts properly placed to have a playout on Monday evening when the members went out for practice and made a good showing in the first heat but the succeeding trials were poor. It was thought this was owing to the stiffness of the new parts. At a late hour in the evening the engine was loaded on Fowle's mill large wagon and Mr. Dennis Reddon furnished the horses to carry it that night to the town of Hingham, to be in time for the muster on Tuesday while the members of the association

AN ILLUMINATED CLOCK.

There is much need right here at the center of the town of an illuminated clock whereby the stranger and our own citizens as well, might be made able to answer the query "what of the night?" And the place for such a clock is on the steeple of the Unitarian church. We do not question that this illuminated timepiece can be secured by subscription. Who will start the paper?

THE ELECTRIC CAR.

Unless care is had on the part of the public, the electric car will make its way through every crossroad in the country. While we are in full sympathy with the spirit of enterprise which seeks to connect the country with our business centres by electric communication, yet it must be remembered that our suburban towns are for residential purposes as well as for the more ready prosecution of business. One can hardly find that locality in near neighborhood to Boston that is not excessively cut up into street railways. We recognize the necessity as well as do others that our public lines of travel should be sufficiently ample as to satisfy the public demand, and all this can be effected by fewer electric railway lines and then placing upon the lesser number of tracks more rolling stock. The disposition now is to indefinitely multiply our electric highways, so we should cry a halt if we desire to preserve in any substantial way the quiet and many attractions of our home life.

Our railroad organizations have at least an average amount of human nature, so it is not surprising that they reach out and lay hold of everything in sight. Arlington needs to say "thus far shalt thou come and no farther." As a town we rightfully pride ourselves upon the many inducements we offer to the stranger or other in all that goes to make up a pleasant, quiet home. But suppose this electric railroad mania goes on for any indefinite length of time? There can be but one result, and that will be to depreciate the value of property and to greatly mar the home life of our people. Political economy is always true to itself. One may reckon upon its teachings as he does upon that of mathematics. The moment you get more than enough of a good thing, that moment you have disturbed the normal condition of things. We are glad to see that there is a disposition on the part of Arlington to say "no" to this frequent asking for more street railways. We ought to keep intact so far as we may be able without disturbing our business interests our public streets and all the attractions belonging thereto.

It is an eyesore to us that a third track for a switch is being laid right in the center of Arlington for the convenience of the Boston Elevated company. This switch is unquestionably to be used for the temporary stabling of cars. It is an infringement upon the rights of Arlington that this should be effected right at the central point in our attractive town and in immediate neighborhood to Pleasant street. It is high time that we as a community bestir ourselves and declare most emphatically that this encroachment upon our domain shall stop forever and at once. It must not be forgotten that the home is the very center around which all our material and immaterial interests must revolve. The query, how is everything at home, is quite as important as how is business in Boston?

The Enterprise will not fail in doing its part in keeping Arlington the attractive residential locality that it is, and to this end we are sure that all her citizens will give their aid. There are questions to be answered in our domestic economy other than in how many different ways may we reach Boston and our cross towns by the electrics.

THE COAL STRIKE.

The coal strike in Pennsylvania is assuming alarming proportions at this date, Sept. 25. It is the old fight between capital and labor, or in other words it is the crowding of the weaker to the wall by the stronger. Just so long as the "almighty dollar" is kept at work to get the better of the poor man, just so long will this fight continue.

Our sympathies are with the laboring man in all these contests, and while we deplore the results that must come from these so-called strikes, we are not surprised at their more or less frequent outbreaks. Capital in nine cases out of ten is both aggressive and insolent. It pays little or no attention to the poor man. Its only object is to multiply itself.

Just suppose for a moment that the employer was to accept the scriptural statement that "the laborer is worthy of his hire?" In such instance you would hear no more of "strikes." Large aggregated wealth, whether such wealth comes in the form of individual possession or in the form of a corporation or trust, is a misfortune to any people. Bryan is right when he puts the man before the dollar. It is hardly possible that this country shall for any indefinite time escape an open warfare if this contention between capital and labor shall long continue. Men and women will and must somehow secure the necessities of life, even if they have to fight for them, and in all this they are right. "The law of self-preservation is the first law of nature."

HOME AGAIN.

Not exactly "from a foreign shore," but from good old New Hampshire, the state that gave us birth, and a state too that has reared and educated a greater number of brainy men and women in comparison to her population than has any other state in the union. And then do not forget that the granite state in all that varied scenery so exquisitely picturesquely surpasses them all. But it is not of New Hampshire that we now write, but of "home again," and all this means Arlington.

We have come back from our vacation a good deal alive, and we are determined that from now on that whatever is of vital interest to the town, both in a material and immaterial way, shall be discussed through these columns for all there is in it. We shall withhold nothing of what we deem to be just and right for the sake of any live man or woman. We shall discuss, as we have heretofore, our schools, our churches, our streets, and indeed all things which pertain to the highest welfare of this people. We said to one of our clergymen the other morning that in most instances men and women are a good deal cowardly—saying just what they don't mean, and meaning just what they don't say. And no one feels this truth more than we do. We are tempted so frequently to soften our sayings in an editorial way, and what is worse than all else we so frequently yield to the temptation that we often feel like putting our hands upon our mouth and our mouth in the dust for such abject cowardice that occasionally comes over us. But God helping us we will maintain hereafter the courage of our convictions. No other man can do our work. When God created us he didn't furnish us with a substitute. Neither did he pick out a man to take your place. We pray for the time to come when there shall be no clergymen found who will not dare to preach just what he believes to be true, and the whole of it, and when no newspaper man can be named who does not dare to write what he thinks, and no physician can be found who will hesitate to proclaim even upon the housetop that the glorious sunshine is essential to health although his practice may be where the shade trees shut out the heavens for the greater part of the day, and so on through the list our prayer is that a manly courage may come to all.

At any rate, so far as we are concerned, we are determined from this date on to be found in our newspaper work on "the Lord's side," and by this we mean, to speak so far as we may be able God's truth upon all subjects of public interest, "whether men will hear or forbear." Live men and women were not placed in this world to be constantly begging one another's pardon, but they were placed here to do honest, manly work, and so it is that we are bound more than ever to do ours. Our vacation has given us a new grip on things, and we will not lessen our hold.

WHY THE DIFFERENCE.

Why the difference between the city and its suburbs and the country? The only answer that can be given to the above query is that God made the country, while man has made the town and its near neighborhood. Whenever and wherever you find men and women living near to the great heart of nature there you will find them in close fraternal relationship to each other. The moment we recognize in a vital way the common mother of us all, that moment we shall recognize that we are sisters and brothers all.

How effectively we have recognized this fortunate truth during the season now nearing its close! For the past three months we have had to do with men and women who have no bank account, who are not interested either in State street or Wall street, who never buy the daily paper that they may learn of the stock market—men and women who are fulfilling one of God's first command by tilling the ground, and this too, be it remembered, while flooded with the sunlight and within sound of the music of the birds and within sight of all that is best in a world supremely beautiful. One is able to get at these men and women, for there comes nothing between them and you save the heavens above and the earth beneath, both of which are attractive forces. As we have said in previous issues of the Enterprise, we are trying through these columns to get near to Arlington, and to know Arlington is to know her men and women.

The difficulty, or rather misfortune, in all the outlying districts of our cities is that we are so usually compelled to make acquaintances and friends almost exclusively through the church, or the club, or the secret society. Now all these organizations are well in their place, but they never can take the place of the individual life. Arlington with her busy life is doing just what the most of our suburban towns are doing.

namely: getting acquainted with people on the outside. In a social way we see each other for the most part on dress parade or on state occasions. We come to have a very superficial acquaintance with our town's people in the aggregate. We in a way lump humanity and then guess at the result.

Now what we ought to do is to get at our man. We should come to know him in his everyday clothes. It isn't when he is "fixed up" and all ready for the prayer meeting, or for the lodgeroom, or the club that the most favorable time is afforded in which you may get at his real self. The highest worth to be found in any man is the supreme fact that he is a man, and the highest worth to be found in any woman is the supreme fact that she is a woman—not the fact that she belongs to the woman's club or the golf club, or that man belongs to the lodge or to the secret society.

Now as the season of the year is approaching when there will be a more frequent coming together of our people let us be wise enough to jump the fences and get at each other. Let us have for each other, as they have in the country, a "God bless you." Let us get down from our high heels, so as to plant our feet on the solid earth. There should be an especial effort made here in Arlington during the coming winter, through our several churches and other organizations, and through our news papers to aid in the salvation of men and women. Not necessarily to increase church membership or to multiply the members of the lodge or club, but to reach out for the individual life. The country man and the country woman are our teachers. They have learned of their superb surroundings, so they come to us with their simple lessons of instruction. They have been teaching us all the summer long, so that now we are anxious that Arlington shall go to school in the country, for it is there and there alone that men and women are reduced or led back to their real value.

QUESTIONS BY THE WAY.

A week or more ago while on our way to the post office somewhat remote from the place where we were stopping, we passed the country school-house just as the pupils were let out for the day. As we had a spare seat in our carriage we took in one of the brightest looking girls of the class. On getting a little acquainted, we played the "schoolmaster" with her. We first quizzed her on her arithmetic. We asked her to define fraction, for she was well up in the study of numbers. In answer to our query she replied: "A fraction is a fractional part of a number"—the exact answer as given in the text-book. We further asked her: "What is a fractional number?" when she replied: "I don't know." And just this kind of idiotic text-book is being used in many of our public schools today, and many of our teachers are blindly following the written page. We told our little travelling companion as best we could all about the term "fraction." We said to her that the word "fraction" comes from the Latin word "frango," meaning to break, and then we gave her the leading parts of the verb so that she might see its different forms. She readily took in the lesson, and so recognized that a fraction must mean something broken, and when applied to numbers that it must mean a unit broken, or a part of a unit.

It happened that a day or two after we met the father, when he said to us: "My girl, Mary, now knows what a fraction is from the lesson you gave her along the road." The little girl had gone home and told her father and mother of the lesson she had so readily received.

The thought we have in mind is this: Why not throw out of the window many of our stupid text-books, so that the teacher may get face to face with the children? Our boys and girls are being killed outright by the dead and meaningless letter of the text-book. We ought not to give the pupil in school a stone when he asks and is hungering for bread.

THE NEW EDIFICE.

The new Baptist church edifice, we are glad to learn from those individually interested, is to be a modern structure in all its plan and appointments. The foundation of the building will be completed before the cold weather is upon us. As has already been stated in these columns, the edifice will be built of stone. Our Baptist friends are showing that spirit of push and enterprise in the new house of worship to be that accomplishes results. Out of their misfortune they are bound to reap a blessing. We believe in any and all religious organizations which do not hesitate to put their shoulders to the wheel, and so put in their best work to make the new better than the old. The Arlington Baptist church has a membership that is up and doing, and a pastor who well knows how to lead his flock.

TO THE WOMAN'S CLUB.

We are sure that it is in keeping with good taste that we earnestly suggest to the Woman's Club of Arlington that it secure in every instance none other than first-class ability to instruct and entertain its members in the varied departments of its organization. It is a dead failure every time to secure that lecturer or reader who is not up with the times in all that belongs to and interests the people of today. To secure ability that can command only a second-class price is to make an investment where both the principal and interest are lost.

The Arlington Woman's Club should enlarge its field of usefulness by placing its fee for membership at so low a rate that the poorest woman in Arlington could afford to become a member, and so partake of the benefits of the organization. "The greatest good to the greatest number" is substantially part and parcel of the golden rule. There is always danger in organized life as in the individual life that it become exclusive and exclusive. "Who belongs?" is sometimes the question asked before the woman who lives on the corner of the street and enjoys her drive in a fashionable turnout will consent to become member of this or that club. Any club is good enough for you and for us which has men and women making up its membership, for it is with men and women we have to do, and not with this one or that one who has an enviable standing in society or fashionable life. The Arlington Woman's Club will achieve its highest work when it reaches out after those other women who need the intellectual help and encouragement of its organization. The question isn't so much how we are edified and instructed as it is how much do we edify and instruct others? So the tennis club life of our town should be so far-reaching that it will gather instead of attempting the vain task of living on self. The highest life, be it remembered, is that life which centers in the life of others.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

In the death of Gen. John M. Palmer, which occurred on Tuesday morning at his home in Springfield, Illinois, the country loses one of its most distinguished citizens. Gen. Palmer had seen much of public life. He had served as governor of his state, and was for several years in the United States Senate. He won renown in the war of the Rebellion.

The Rev. Reginald H. Coe, of Belmont, will preach at St. John's church Academy street, on tomorrow morning. Service at 10:30.

Rev. Harry Fay Fister has been at Springfield this week attending the sessions of the state convention of the Universalist church.

The regular services will be held at the Universalist church tomorrow. The subject of the evening service will be "True friendship."

Dr. Charles A. Libby returned to Arlington this week, after a three months in Portland, Me., and has resumed practice at 659 Mass. avenue.

Mrs. Dunham, mother of Druggist Leavitt's wife, by a mishap fell down a flight of stairs on Thursday morning and dislocated her right shoulder.

The fact that there are today fifteen hundred pupils in our public schools tells its own story. The Arlington public schools are at the head of the list.

Tomorrow Mr. Wm. E. Wood, organist and choir leader at the Baptist church, is to play the organ at Perkins street Baptist church, East Somerville.

The Misses Helen C. and Annie W. Wood, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. E. Wood, are now well and pleasantly settled in their studies at Vassar college.

People residing on Academy street are praying for some sort of top-dressing for their new stone-made highway. Please hurry up, Mr. Highway Commissioner.

The Girls' Friendly society will entertain friends next Wednesday evening in St. John's Parish house. The members of the Young Mens' society and others are invited.

Mr. and Mrs. Warren A. Peirce and family returned to their home on Academy street on Thursday. They have had a delightful summer at their home on the Concord river.

The alarm of fire yesterday afternoon was caused by a lamp exploding at the residence of Mr. William Finley, on Grove street. The damage was slight, the chemicals only being used.

Mrs. James O'Neil and one of her children are ill at their home, 5 Teele street place, of diphtheria, and a child of Mr. and Mrs. Abram B. LeBlanc, 43 Mass. avenue, is ill with the same disease.

The Samaritan society connected with the Universalist church will hold its first meeting of the fall with its president, Mrs. Frank Frost, at her home on Old Mystic street, next Tuesday afternoon.

The young ladies of the Universalist Sunday school are to hold food sales every Saturday in the church vestry from three to five p. m., commencing Oct. 6. No admission. Don't fail to patronize them if you like delicate home cooking.

A pleasant chat with Mr. Joshua Dodge on Tuesday at his home on Russell street, found him interested on all the current subjects of the hour. Mr. Dodge's 87 years do not lessen his zeal in all intellectual and philosophical research.

The St. John's Young Mens' society begin their regular weekly meetings for the season in the Parish house on Tuesday next at eight o'clock. Election of officers. Young men cordially invited.

This evening Mr. Fred W. Ross leaves his connection with Johnson's express. He will take a week's vacation, after which he will enter the employment of the Joseph Breck & Sons corporation of Boston.

The Baptist Sunday school will celebrate "Rally day" in Grand Army hall tomorrow with appropriate exercises. At the morning service Dr. Watson will preach on "Progression in Sunday school work." Service at 10:45. All are invited.

All has been confusion at the centre the past week by the laying of the turn-out opposite the Unitarian church for the cars of the Broadway line. Work on the bridge is progressing finely, and if nothing happens cars will be running within a month.

Several members of Bethel Lodge, I. O. O. F., intend going to Worcester by trolley tomorrow. They will visit the Odd Fellows' home. The party will leave Arlington at 7:30 a. m., and would be pleased to have any Odd Fellow accompany them.

Nothing gives us more pleasure than to find on our return to Arlington that our advertisers, representing the leading business men of this town and its near vicinity, are busy in their several departments of labor. The Enterprise, in early issues, will make individual mention of them.

At a meeting of the Arlington Board of trade on Tuesday evening the proposition to close the stores for four evenings of the week during the winter, was referred to the proper committee. A committee was selected to bring at the next meeting the nomination of officers for the coming year.

The annual ball of Bay State L. O. L., No. 418, will be held in Town hall on Thursday evening, Dec. 13. The energetic committee of arrangements are making elaborate preparations for an event that will far outstrip previous bails. A good time can be looked for.

Mr. Warren Russell, who took a preliminary course at the High school last year, has entered Harvard college. Mr. Russell is a bright and enthusiastic scholar, and his host of friends here will wish him any amount of goodwill and success. He was one of our brightest and most gentlemanly scholars at the High school.

Our clergymen have evidently been having a good time at their several summer resorts, if we may judge from their healthful appearance. We have met the most of them since our return, and they have impressed us with their increased capital of life. And this is just as it should be. A live gospel means a live man behind it.

While on his way to the fire at the home of Mr. William Finley on Grove street yesterday, Mr. William Irwin of Forest st., a member of Hose 1, met with an accident. He was riding bareback at full gallop when the horse slipped and fell, throwing him heavily to the ground, receiving a damaged knee and ankle and badly wrenching his side.

Mrs. Joseph Butterfield, with Mrs. Harry Fay Fister as her guest, started for New York City last Monday to attend the charming nuptials of Mr. Frederic Moody and Miss Catherine Perry of Hoboken, N. J., on Tuesday at high noon at St. Paul's church. All points of interest in New York, Brooklyn and Hoboken were visited with great pleasure by our friends.

Mrs. D. L. Tappan, 467 Mass. avenue, while out driving on Monday afternoon, was thrown from her carriage on Lake street, her horse taking fright and running some distance. The carriage was upset. Mrs. Tappan sustained a fracture of one of the small bones of the wrist. The horse escaped injury, while the carriage was somewhat damaged. The horse came to a stop on Winter street.

On Tuesday morning our chief of police, Mr. Harriman, picked up a beautiful dead English pheasant on the sidewalk, a little west of the post office. It is supposed the bird flew against the wires alongside the street, and so met its death. Mr. Harriman is to preserve the bird in form. The English pheasant is an Asiatic bird naturalized in Great Britain prior to 1509.

The musical service given in the Unitarian church on Sunday evening by the Fisk university jubilee singers was very greatly enjoyed. This company of singers, known the world over, has kept itself abreast with the choicest and most cultured melodies to be found in the world of music. These singers have been before the public for more than 30 years, and during all this while they have kept well to the front in their professional work.

The Loyal Temperance Legion will resume its weekly meetings on Monday afternoon at 4:15, in the Parish house, Maple street. The L. T. L. is a branch of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, at whose request the Rev. James Veames fulfills the arduous work of superintendent. The Legion, which instructs young people in temperance and good habits is entirely non-denominational, and invites all the boys and girls of Arlington to rally round its banner.

A call on Thursday morning at the Kindergarten school on Maple street found fifty pupils in session, and the full corps of teachers of last year well settled in their work. And the good dog Prince was there too. This faithful dog is promptly on hand every morning at 7:30 o'clock. As we called on Thursday morning we found Prince had been looking over the morning paper, hunting for the latest news. Ah, that dog Prince is an intelligent specimen of his race, otherwise he would not so regularly attend the Kindergarten, a school that ranks among the very first of its kind.

In the interest of the preservation of game birds and for the benefit of our readers who are sportsmen, we are requested by the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association to state that it is illegal to kill woodcock, ruffed grouse (or partridge) or quail before Oct. 1st, the date of the open season having been changed from Sept. 15th to Oct. 1st by the legislature of 1900. The sale of woodcock and partridges is prohibited for three years. Cloth posters and abstracts or pocket-manuals of the game laws can be obtained free of charge on application to the secretary, 5 Park square, Boston.

At a meeting of the Arlington Baptist society held on Tuesday evening, it was voted that the advisory committee of fifteen, which was authorized at a meeting of the society held Aug. 6, be made a permanent building committee. Progress was reported by the committee in the matter of making detailed plans for the new church edifice, and it is hoped that they will be ready for the bids of contractors in about two weeks. The permanent building committee consists of Messrs. E. Nelson Blake (chairman), J. Howell Crosby, Wendell E. Richardson, W. H. Allen, Daniel L. Tappan, Sylvester C. Frost, George G. Allen, Wm. E. Wood, Walter H. Peirce, J. G. Leetch, Mrs. Henry V. Hill, Mrs. Philip Eberhardt, Mrs. Henry Hornblower and Mrs. Joseph P. Wyman. This committee has been sub-divided into a number of sub-committees to cover various divisions of the work. Rev. C. H. Watson, D. D., the pastor of the church, is honorary member of the committee and also of these sub-committees. The meeting of the society was adjourned to Oct. 9 at 7:45 p. m.

At a meeting of the board of selectmen last Monday evening, the board by a unanimous vote, decided to give the Woburn & Boston street railway leave to withdraw its petition for a location on Lowell street, from the Lexington boundary line to Mass. avenue, Arlington. In view of the former experience of the town with Col. Woodward and his associates in regard to various railroad enterprises, this action meets the hearty approval of a large majority of citizens of the town who are aware of the methods of the syndicate with which Col. Woodward is associated. A public hearing on this petition was held in Town hall on Monday evening, Sept. 17, and was reported at length in the columns of the Enterprise. At that time a strong opposition manifested itself in regard to the proposed road.

Following a precedent established a few years ago, the board of directors voted that all members elected to the club after Oct. 1, 1900, and before March 31, 1901, shall have one-half their annual dues remitted, thus placing the dues of new members for the coming six months at $7.50. Members desiring to present names of candidates for membership should forward the applications at once.

The annual ball of Bay State L. O. L., No. 418, will be held in Town hall on

One of the first calls that we made after our return home was at the Robbins library. And by the way, one can hardly imagine how we have missed during the summer long in our department of labor this Robbins library of which we all are so proud. We were glad to learn through the librarian, Miss Newton, of the many improvements recently made by its official management for the further convenience of the public. The reading-room for the children upstairs has been neatly and conveniently arranged for the small folks. The books upon the shelves have all been recently classified anew and properly designated by subjects, so that one may readily find just what he wants. And then, as already known, the public can now personally go among the books and make the desired selection. The Enterprise has had much to say in its columns of Robbins library and it will have much to say of it in the future, and largely for the reason that it is such an educational force in this community. We were most agreeably surprised to learn that more than 5000 of Arlington's men, women and children avail themselves of this school of schools.

Mr. Harry W. Bullard, 29 Academy street, has purchased a delightful summer residence right at the foot of Black mountain, in the town of Sandwich. His newly-purchased property is almost in touch with Mountainside cottage at White Face, that haven of rest and inspiration of which we have so frequently written in these columns. Echo cottage is the appropriate name of Mr. and Mrs. Bullard's mountain home, for one may stand all the day long at the foot of Black mountain and converse with himself with peculiar satisfaction, for his voice will return to him in just those clear audible tones in which he gives it forth. Echo cottage is more delightfully situated, if this be possible, than Mountainside cottage, for Black mountain, something over 4000 feet in height, shuts down upon it on the northwest, while to the immediate south comes Young mountain, and then to the north, within hand's reach, is Flat mountain, and then follow long chains of mountains on either side, while to the front, facing eastward, comes the picturesque valley and the Osipee mountains which Whittier loved and of which he wrote. Echo cottage is the gem-setting of one of the rarest pictures. We are glad that we belong to the Bullard family.

Mrs. Lavinia Hopkins Crosby, who resides at 17 Court street, received several of her friends on Tuesday, the occasion being the 98th anniversary of her birthday. Mrs. Crosby is the wife of the late Mr. David Crosby, who died a few years ago at the age of 92, and a sister of the late Captain Reuben Hopkins. For something like 50 years she has resided in Arlington, and during all this while she has been a member of and a worshipper at the Baptist church. On Thursday we called on Mrs. Crosby, who has now seen almost a century of years. We found her reading her well-worn Bible. She received us so pleasantly that we at once felt at home in her presence. Her general health is remarkably good, with sight and hearing of one many years her junior. In spite of nearly her century mark, Mrs. Crosby hardly looks more than three score and ten. She has led a quiet, useful life, and is much beloved by her many friends. She reads with much interest The Watchman each week, a Baptist paper that she has taken for years, and she daily reads portions of the Bible. She said to us that life had been to her full of happiness, and she added that she should be glad to go at any moment the Lord might call for her. Of her happy future she has not a doubt. How small our varied and heated theological discussions appear and are in the presence of such unquestioning faith! Among those who called on Tuesday to give loving greeting to Mrs. Crosby were her pastor, Rev. Dr. Watson the Misses Ethel and Antoinette Wellington, Mrs. Rice of Central street, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Hopkins, a grand nephew and two grandnieces from Boston, Mrs. Alma Frost of Belmont and others. All friends came laden with pleasant remembrances. Mrs. Crosby's delightful old age is replete with all that charm and peace which make life full of years desirable. The Enterprise extends to Mrs. Crosby its warmest congratulations, hoping that her anniversary days shall yet be many.

But on we go, the children saying good-by to the waters of the gentle flowing river wherein they had daily splashed to their hearts' content, stopping for a moment at that never-failing spring by the roadside, of which we have before written, for no one ever passes that perennial bubbling stream without drinking of its waters.

At the post office we make a little halt that we may say "so-long" to the postmaster, Mr. Tappan, and his pretty wife, both of whom had kindly handed us more than one letter, which we read with devouring interest, and who had failed in no instance to place in our hands the Arlington Enterprise and the Boston daily papers.

By the post office and the little Baptist church, we climb our first long hill, from the top of which we give another look backward. Lot's wife would never have been turned into a pillar of salt had she looked back upon such a scene.

Well, the entire ride to Meredith was a continuous succession of delightful panoramic views. The country road which now and then could be seen a long way ahead, as it made its way over some steep hill to be climbed, became altogether picturesque. After four hours of a ride not to be forgotten, we arrived at the railroad station in Meredith, where we caught our first sight of a steam car since the 30th day of last June. It made us grow sick and faint at heart to think that again we were to hear the puff of the steam engine and to be shot through town and country, instead of quietly making our way along the country road, either by private conveyance or on foot. At that moment we sympathized with Thoreau in his hate of the noisy, disturbing railroad. But we soon came to our better self, recognizing that we are in a busy, bustling world, and that if we are to keep up with the "procession" we must put our spurs to the steed on which we journey. But there is a wide difference between the sound that we at this moment hear of the ponderous steamroller as it goes up and down Academy street, grinding the cobble stones to atoms thereon, and that of the music of the birds in their mountain fastnesses.

But we are already getting reconciled to our changed surroundings, so that soon we hope to be able to make our share of noise in the world's big bustle and bustle. And yet, active as we may become during the hours of the day in our allotted work, we are sure that the mountains will more or less frequently steal upon us during the dreamy hours of the night.

Correspondence.

Arlington, Sept. 27, 1900.

Dear Enterprise:

Don't think that now we are home again we are to be shut off from letter-writing. No, indeed: there is too much fun and careless freedom to be had in an epistolary correspondence for us to end altogether our letter scribbling. We dearly love that column of the Enterprise where we can say things in that sort of off-hand way in which one is not held absolutely responsible and yet where the writer may be said to be for the most part truthful in his statements.

It would be a positive denial and sacrifice on our part were we not to tell our readers of that ride of 25 miles by private conveyance on last Monday morning, taking us, a party of 14, from White Face to the railroad station at Meredith. The morning was one of the clearest and most inviting of the many we had had at the mountains. At eight o'clock sharp on that Monday morning, with the outline of the mountains so clearly defined against the bluest and softest of skies, Mr. Tappan of the White Face post office, and by the way a brother of Mr. D. L. Tappan of 467 Mass. avenue, sent two of his gayest turnouts for us passengers, and a two-horse team for our baggage, with drivers who have long since distinguished themselves as experts in handling the ribbons.

"All aboard" was the shout, but before seating ourselves in the carriage pointed out for us, we insisted on taking another look down that far-stretching valley, which had become to us not unlike that valley in eastern Thessaly in Greece known the world over as the Vale of Tempe, so celebrated for its beauty, and of which poets have so sweetly sung. Did that valley ever look so picturesque and attractive to us as then, at the moment of our departure? And did those mountains ever look so kindly down upon us, as with that good-by on our lips? We would have hugged both mountains and valley in that supreme moment of adieu had our arms only been long enough. "The spirit was" more than "willing, but the flesh was weak."

Well, the good-by had to be said, so at last we were off. As we passed the scattered farm-houses on our way to the post office there stood in every doorway the friends we had made during the past twelve weeks, waving us a "God bless you." And you may be sure that we did not fail while going at a 2.40 speed to call down the choicest of heaven's blessings upon those men and women under the shadow of the everlasting hills who had given us such an abundant entrance into their innermost lives and who had so come into our own life. For them we shall have forevermore an affection that will not pale and cool in its ardor as the years multiply.

But on we go, the children saying good-by to the waters of the gentle flowing river wherein they had daily splashed to their hearts' content, stopping for a moment at that never-failing spring by the roadside, of which we have before written, for no one ever passes that perennial bubbling stream without drinking of its waters.
